Subject: Haunted Leger Hotel/Historic Mokelumne Hill and Gallegos Murder Site Sat Jan 26, 2008 2:32 pm - My last ebook was HPI: Leger Hotel. Below is another Leger Hotel investigation story.

QUOTE

I am losing track of my days. It's already Friday, November 16, 2007 and that means I have to get ready for my second investigation of the legendary Hotel Leger (pronounced Lu Zhay) in Mokelumne Hill. See their website at: http://www.hotelleger.com/ The gorgeous Autumn Devich, manager of the Hotel Leger, is preparing for my follow-up story of this very historic hotel. The Leger once was a courthouse, jail and even had a place out back to hang criminals. With this follow-up, I get to spend the whole night in Room 7, George Leger's room (one of the most haunted rooms in the hotel) by myself, while paranormal investigators/scouts Shannon 'Ms. Macabre' McCabe - President of HPI, Chris Grissom - Technician and Tim Hawkins - Lead Investigator of Group B. They will be staying in Room 11, the second most haunted room. Chris only gets to stay for a little while, because he has to work the following day. Autumn set us up with an awesome price for our hotel rooms, they are FREE! Thank you Autumn, you are the best! Will I find my Room "1408"? Hmmm#133;let's see... I love this gold mining town that was founded in 1848. I hope to encounter George Leger's ghost or the Lady in White ghost that haunt this hotel. George is known to hang out at the saloon and some of the rooms. There even have been noises of ghostly children too, so let's see how this investigation goes!

First off, I got my vehicle the 'Ghost Tracker' filled up with some prime gas and picked up Shannon, Tim and Chris. It was a treat for Shannon, Tim and Chris to ride in this jazzy sportscar and I threw on the theme to X-Files for them. Of course, they were all complaining on how cramped they felt in my car and I sort of tuned out their complaints, so I could concentrate on the investigation tonight. As we arrived the lobby was filled with a great crowd of people playing pool, having drinks at the bar and enjoying the inside décor of this historic hotel. I introduced myself to the lovely bartender named Jennifer Sanders-Metzger, she has been working at this hotel for 3 years. Clairvoyance runs in her family and she is a clairvoyant herself. So the first thing she did was introduce herself to the entities of this hotel.

The entities have been known to toy with people in this establishment, they are sort of mischievous at times. One night when she was closing down the hotel, she saw from her peripheral vision figures of light moving around. Another time, she was setting up a plate setting and walked away. The manager told her to set the plate setting, because it hasn't been done. She knew she set the plate setting, but did it a second time. The second time around after she walked away, the plate setting was missing again. She did it a third time and asked the ghosts to stop playing these games and they finally stopped. Another time, these three kids were playing with their bouncy balls. The balls disappeared and were found later by the fireplace upstairs in one of the rooms, in the shape of a triangle. When Jennifer was closing down the beer room, she saw the bottom of a phantom dress swoosh by her, it was a light colored dress and she was quite startled from this partial apparition. Sometimes the entities will hold the door knob, while she is trying to open a door. Jennifer tells me that when a woman named Debbie actually lived downstairs in the hotel, she would tell George Leger - owner of the hotel to turn the heat on, because it was cold. When asking George Leger (George Leger was the owner of this establishment back in the 1800s - so he has been deceased for a long time) to turn on the heat, a blast of hot air swept the room. One time Debbie was cleaning up after a New Year's Party and the champagne bottles were mysteriously lined up at each hotel room door with party hats placed on top of the champagne bottles. This was done by some unseen entity.

As Jennifer started serving other customers with drinks, I noticed a smiling blonde at the end of the bar. I introduced myself to Trae Parker, a regular customer of this establishment. Trae tells me that she has lived two years in this town. She has seen phantom corpses hanging from the trees out back of the hotel. Trae is quite the character, she calls herself the princess of Mokelumne Hill and she is a 'sensitive'. When she called herself a princess, she had a sly grin on her face. She is able to talk on her portable telephone, because she lives about a block away from the hotel and brings her portable telephone to the bar. Her home is located at Spooky Hollow/China Gulch, which is next to the local cemetery. She tells me that her house is haunted. At times she has felt bound and trapped in her home and she can hear phantom footsteps throughout her house. There has been pictures removed from her house and at times she feels like a female angel follows her to protect her from other unseen forces. She tells me that she assisted police in the woodchipper murder of a woman named Cindy Vanderheim. She goes on to tell me that the population of Mokelumne Hill is 600, but they have 60,000 people buried in this town. There is more dead, than living in this town, she proclaims. She has heard stories from guests of this hotel, where they say that blankets have been held around their bodies and they are unable to leave the bed due to the restriction from the held tight blankets.

This gold mining town was involved in the French/Chilean War, in which militia was called up to fight in this war. Sometimes up to 5 people a day were murdered on the streets of Mokelumne Hill. Bob Barnes, retired Colonel of the California State Military Reserve (US Army) confirms Trae's story.

I met another regular of this establishment, her name is Mary McCartney. She tells me she opened up a door, where the old jail was located and felt a cold breeze as soon as she opened the door. When this happened, she felt a fluttering on her chest. She goes on to elaborate that her ancestors are from this town. So just perhaps, some of her ancestors haunt this hotel and town too. She now lives in the old family home and she can feel the presence of her grandfather and other ancestors in her home. She also witnessed a bottle being knocked down in the bar area by an unseen force.

While I was making my interviews, Shannon, Chris & Tim were busy checking out various areas of the hotels, trying to gather EVPs and digital photos of anything that could be considered paranormal. Shannon makes contact with paranormal investigator/Vice President of HPI John Wachter, aka Vlawde. Vlawde is a lead investigator for Team A and they are conducting a residential haunting investigation this evening. Team A consists of John Wachter, Alicia Perry, Mary Casiano & Jennifer Baca. They are working on a home cleansing and to make the owners of this residence comfortable in their surroundings. On this night Team A and Team B in two different locations, are in constant communication via cellular phone to discuss any findings.

Cheri Garamendi, bartender of this establishment told me that she has felt strange things in this hotel too, but didn't elaborate because she was so busy waiting on customers at the bar. I learn that Cheri Garamendi is the relative of US Politician John Raymond Garamendi, who resides in this County. Samuel Andahl the dishwasher has heard things falling numerous times and when investigating, there was no one around to cause these objects to fall to the ground.

Finally it was getting late and it was time to head back to our rooms. This night we were equipped with two video cameras, 4 digital cameras, 3 electronic digital audio recorders and 1 Listen Up sound enhancer. I don't know all the results yet, so let's see what Shannon says in her FINDINGS and CONCLUSION part of this article.

Trae Parker came by my hotel room and as soon as she walked in she felt a heaviness on her chest. It bothered her so much, she had to immediately exit my room. I'm not a sensitive, so I didn't feel what she was feeling. In fact I fell asleep comfortably in my bed with warm quilts and soft pillows. About 3:06am, I heard footsteps approach my bed. There were 5 steps that seemed to come from the door towards my bed. At 4:16am, my bed vibrated slightly, then stopped. Now to debunk my own experience, perhaps the footstep sounds were not emanating from my room, but from an occupied room near my room, and perhaps the vibrating of my bed came from people walking outside of my room? I am not going to say that what I experienced was truly paranormal, just maybe it was something from my own half asleep groggy imagination. But, who can say what I experienced is real or not real? In the morning, I checked on Shannon and Tim. Shannon & Tim experienced absolutely nothing in their room.

As we left this historic hotel, I can see why people want to stop and see this hotel, this whole town is full of history. This hotel is the legacy of this town's history. In the morning, we cramped inside my vehicle the 'Ghost Tracker' and stopped off at the Odd Fellows Cemetery and Sutter Creek City Cemetery circa for both: 1854. I noticed when I left the Hotel Leger there were an unusual amount of chem trails in the sky. Chem trails that zig zagged, if I was an investigator for chem trails, I would have liked to looked into this unusual display more, but I had to get the Shannon & Tim home. We stopped off at Denny's in Jackson and talked about our investigation of the Hotel Leger.

I finally got everyone home and prepared for a scouting mission on this day Saturday, November 17, 2007. I thought about the email I received from Dana & Jennifer Mierkey, it read:

"I enjoyed reading your well done website. My daughter and I recently went to Hotel Leger in Mokelumne Hill ca. We not only got numerous orbs but a figure of a woman in an oval mirror in room eight an otherwise plain unremarkable room. To the naked eye there is no marks, nothing on the wall or the mirror but the little digital camera screen kept showing what looked like a star. My daughter Jennifer was drawn to the room again and again, she always feels them as do I. In one shot she is drawn directly to the wall, looking that way, feeling her but not seeing her or having a clue until we got home late that night and downloaded photos onto an old 50 inch screen TV. it was quite shocking to see a pretty obvious woman in the mirror. We got interested in this hotel after Jennifer attended a wedding there three weeks ago and came home with photos of orbs. while in one of the rooms with Becky her sister, Jennifer was standing near her, both getting ready for the wedding, the window slammed shut and the door creaked. Jennifer decided maybe she wouldn't spend the night, instead Becky and husband did but didn't comment on hearing or seeing things. there was one or two orbs in their room on the photos Jennifer took. I was very interested in the photos she had so I went with Jennifer and a young coworker of hers last Saturday. the downstairs room was a jail and prior to that a dungeon with a hanging tree out back. The town has an extremely violent past, I would say both Jennifer, myself and the young gal Dani that was with us feel the whole town is at unrest. After talking to a gal who works for the hotel and has always lived in Mokelumne Hill I felt our feeling were validated. The hotel worker said there is a balance of bad and good energy there through out the town and always has been. She states some nights it feels so thick she wont step outside. While taking pictures in the dark creepy basement-jail I silently asked anyone to step forward and the orbs were not only around the air they are on my clothing. Just recently one of the guest of the bridal party, a sister to the bride, Jennifer and I don't know her, we just heard the story she was terrified of a woman in the room. Finally after going through my oldest daughter who went through the bride then to the sister Tracy for the photo it was sent to Jennifer and myself and we were shocked to see her photo of room eight is exactly the same as ours, only difference was hers was shot during the middle of the night in the dark and ours in late afternoon before it got dark. She picked up the lady in the mirror too. It's quite clear on the big screen on our photo. Since you are into this kind of thing I thought you would find it interesting. I am not terribly computer proficient so am sending the third and fourth party email photo from the lady Tracy to you by doing a forward.

Thank you for your time
Dana and Jennifer Mierkey
Lathrop CA"

Through contacts via this first initial email, I invited HPI Paranormal Investigators-in-Training Dana & Jennifer on a scouting mission, they both showed up to my house. I briefed Dana & Jennifer on the email I received, it was in regard to a murder committed by serial killers Gerard & Charlene Gallegos:

"Hi again; her name was Virginia (Ginger) Mochel, she is my mom's little sister. She was 35 when it happened (In 1980, July, I think), I was just 13. She was a bartender at the Sail Inn/1522 W. Jefferson Blvd, West Sacramento and had just closed it for the night and had gotten into her car when Gallego came up to her car window and pointed a gun at her. He had been in the bar earlier that night and saw her. So just her car was left in the lot and she never came home, so the babysitter called police (She had a 4-year-old son, Glenn Mochel, and a 9-year-old girl, Michelle Rubalcava). They took her in their van and I understand after she was assaulted, was killed (Charlene testified that she was angry and defiant and told him to just kill her; also, I once read she wanted to call her children to say goodbye). They tied her up with fishing line, and when they found her some months later, detectives remembered that Charlene had told them they'd gone fishing that day (they were initially questioned in the missing-persons investigation). So that helped catch them. It was a horrendous and devastating thing for my mom to lose her little sister, and also, we were kept from the children by their father, who also was an early suspect. (They were divorced). So we lost that whole part of the family. It's been sad to see my mom go through that, but she hides a lot and seems very strong. Mostly I wish she could see the two children again and have them forgive us all for seeming not to contact them (the mail was returned by Michelle's father) Thank you again. I think she is in heaven too. I hope it's not just that I need to think that, but that she really is. Elizabeth "

Dana and Jennifer were equipped with two electronic digital audio recorders for EVPs and two digital cameras. We jumped in the Ghost Tracker and headed off to the Old Historic Broadway Cemetery first. They have read about this cemetery and wanted to see the cemetery for themselves. I interviewed two ground workers Ashley Fortune & Andrew Pisansky of the NCCC Americorps. I asked them if they have witnessed anything paranormal at this cemetery and both said "no". We left the cemetery and went straight to the Sail Inn in West Sacramento. I used my Listen Up sound enhancer and tried to make contact with Virginia (Ginger) Mochel, while Dana & Jennifer tried to record EVPs and took pictures around this bar. We were undercover, because the bar was full with patrons and we didn't want to make it obvious. Due to the traffic noise and patrons talking, I was unable to establish any paranormal communication with Virginia. All of the photographs were normal and showed no signs of residual haunting activity. Jennifer did her own research on the Gallegos and said that Virginia was kidnapped at this site and taken 20 miles down the road and finally murdered. Due to this fact, the residual haunting activity would most likely extend from Sail Inn (Point A) to murder location 20 miles away (Point B). I decided the best time to actually investigate this site would be after the bar closed and there is less traffic. There is too much noise interference to conduct a good investigation. We left and since Dana & Jennifer traveled all the way from Lathop to conduct this preliminary scouting mission, I figured I better give them a fun scouting mission, so I decided to stop off at the house on 22nd and H Street. Both were excited, looking at the gargoyles of this old home, as they snapped pictures of this house, they were getting orb shots everywhere. Jennifer even got a picture of what looked like a white mist leaving the 2nd floor window. I was shocked to see so many people driving by the house, snapping pictures and discovered that people have been reading my past article about this house.

Case example, I interviewed Carrine Hansen and her mother Goria Hill, they read my article and had to see this house for themselves, they told me that they even read my I-5 Killer article about the murder site at I-5/Sutterville. (I took Dana & Jennifer to I-5/Sutterville too). I told Carrine and Goria that I will be taking Dana & Jennifer to Doreathea Puente's F Street Boarding House. Carrine asks "can I follow you over there?" I smiled and said "more the merrier". We stopped at the F Street Boarding House and there were crows flying all around this house, which made the house even more spookier. The 4 ladies that I brought over here, started snapping pictures and got some excellent orb pictures at this house. One of Jennifer's photos showed 8 orbs around the house. Coincidentally, there were 8 makeshift graves at this house. As they were taking pictures, Robert Gordon a neighbor to this house asked what we were doing. I told him that we were paranormal investigators and I was a journalist. With a smile on his face he took me over to his house. I met his lovely wife Karisten Lockhart and she told me about the paranormal activity in their own home. I asked them if I could conduct an investigation and they said "yes". Robert Gordon read the Sacramento News & Review account of my previous investigation of the F Street Boarding House and was impressed with the report, he was now ready to have an investigation of his own home. As I left Robert & Karisten, I gathered up Dana, Jennifer, Carrine & Goria and took them to the Sacramento Theater Company and from the pictures they took, they got some more orb shots at this G Street location. Finally Carrine & Goria headed home and Dana & Jennifer treated me to dinner at the Tower Café.

I debriefed them about the scouting mission and afterwards with a smile, I told them that the Tower Café is next to the Tower Theater, which is supposingly haunted. Jennifer snaps a few photos of the theater. As I thanked them for my dinner, I asked if they had a satisfying day of scouting and both were very pleased. They were both tired and now have a long drive back to Lathrop. I would say it was a fulfilling weekend of ghost hunting. Now let's find out what Shannon has to say about the Leger Hotel. Shannon, take it away!

FINDINGS: I still need to go over numerous hours of video & audio. I did not experience anything first hand, but who's to say there won't be an EVP or something on the video. Stay tuned.

SHANNON'S CONCLUSION: With all the stories from the Hotel Leger's staff I would give this place a 7 on the Spook Meter!

HPI: BEALE AFB – GERMAN POW CAMP (PARANORMAL INVESTIGATION)

Beale AFB German POW Camp Haunting Investigation Sat Jan 26, 2008 2:56 pm QUOTE

Today is Sunday, September 2, 2007, Labor Day weekend. But, before we move forward to the Beale AFB investigation, I get a call from new HPI Paranormal Investigator Debbie Butler on Saturday. Debbie actually joined HPI, after learning I was in HPI and hasn't been on any investigations yet. But, she is ready! Debbie tells me she has a very interesting story that may just peak my curiosity. We meet at Tower Cafe and with big sparkling eyes, she tells me a long story of paranormal experiences that have plagued her life. At the age of 7, she saw her stepbrother's deceased mom. She learns that she is an intuitive, at times she sees 'dead people'. All through her life, she feels presences. During her early years, late at night, she witnesses a shooting star. After the shooting star disintegrates into nothingness, spirits start whispering into her ear. They tell her soon there will be a crisis in her family. The prediction comes true. Debbie's deceased grandfather blows into her ear. When he was living, blowing into a family member's ear, was something he was fond of doing. Debbie's deceased grandfather would also make his presence known to Debbie's grandmother. He would also walk around the house, waking Debbie. Debbie has seen full body apparitions, she has had ghost dreams. In one dream she says 'boo' to the spirit and the spirit jumps out at her. There has been times when spirits gathered around her bed and held her down with her own blanket. She discovers that at her mom's house, a young child died of some sort of illness and she feels the presence of that child. As an intuitive, she walks up to a K Jeweler clerk and has an urge to tell her something important, because the clerk's deceased husband is now standing next to Debbie. The deceased husband who has died 3 months ago tells his ex-wife through Debbie that she has something very important to do, it had to do with his son wanting to get his share of money from the house and he was trying to stop his son, he wanted the house left as is, with his wife. He proved he was standing next to Debbie, when he told Debbie to tell his wife what his favorite song was. The clerk does what her deceased husband suggests and stops the son from taking his share of the house.

Besides ghosts, Debbie had the strangest paranormal experience in 1994, when the lights of the house she was living in would flicker on and off. Then all of a sudden 2 'gray' aliens appeared in front of her grandmother, hands outstretched. There was light emitting from the palm of their hands and eyes. The aliens glided to the left and disappeared. Her grandmother was not aware of the presence of the aliens and Debbie does not know why they appeared. This is Debbie's story and what a story it was.

Now, let's move up to Sunday. 7pm, I arrive to the Countess' home. Yep, I'm talking about Countess Shannon McCabe. Rolling in was Tim Hawkins in his VW Golf he calls the 'Blue Orb'. I look at Tim, I look at Shannon and tell them both, we are not rolling in Shannon's Ectoplasma Mobile and we''re not rolling in Tim's Blue Orb, we're rolling in the Ghost Tracer, my car. Shannon looks around for another team member. Jennifer Baca was missing. I told Shannon that Jennifer has fallen ill and won't make this investigation. She is disappointed that she got sick, but I promised I would keep her appraised of our investigation. Tim and Shannon with their cases filled with equipment pile in my car and we head up I-5 North towards Marysville/Yuba City to meet up with Randy McCuddy, who is in the Air Force and his wife Alexis McCuddy. They brief us about the haunting activity at the former Camp Beale POW Camp that held German and Japanese prisoners of war. At one time this camp held 1000 prisoners. The POWs would provide agriculture labor to the nearby farmers. For recreation the POWs played soccer. There was tragedy at these POW camps. There were suicides and there was retribution by other POWs, In 1944, the POWs did other side jobs like mending clothing. In 1946 the camp closed. The POW cemetery was moved from Beale AFB to a site in San Bruno. Randy in his Mustang Cobra leads us to the base, Beale AFB. We check in with the guards, they take our identification and they take my registration to my vehicle and my insurance information. I guess they were checking that we weren't Al Queda. The security guards were looking me over and looking over my documentation real carefully. Since, I can pass as an Italian, as a Mexican or someone from the Middle East, due to my olive dark complexion, I started feeling nervous. I started hearing the theme song to Midnight Express and at any time I would have machine guns pointed to my head, as my arms are being raised over my head. Finally with a sigh of relief, they gave me my passes to enter the base. The Midnight Express song started to fade away as I re-entered my vehicle and got the go-ahead to move on.

We arrived at the Camp Beale German POW Camp. As we took video footage of the POW camp, checked for EVPs and took digital photos, Randy started getting a burning sensation on his arm. We looked at his arm and a scratch mark was forming. How he obtained this scratch mark is anyone's guess. He said, he didn't bump into anything that would have caused the scratch mark. The scratch mark on his arm is inconclusive on how it was caused. Tim and Shannon used the dowsing rods to try and communicate with any spirits that may be lingering at this POW camp. Tim and Shannon would think of questions and have me relate the questions in German. I used to speak fluent German, since I spent 3 years in Germany, while in the Army. I am still versed in German, but I'm not as good as I used to be in speaking it, but I was able to translate most of Shannon and Tim's questions. If we get any German language EVPs, I will be shocked! While Tim was using his dowsing rods, they indicated that we were speaking to a Japanese soldier captured at Iwo Jima in 1942. This is obviously incorrect as the battle of Iwo Jima was not fought until 1945.
Alexis who speaks Japanese helped Tim translate his questions. After checking some of my photographs, I did notice I captured some unusual orb activity. Of course, orbs really don't have any foundation, except for the fact I can't capture any orb activity at my own home, even after I have taken over a thousand photos in the darkness of my house.

We didn't see any paranormal activity with our own eyes, but we did manage to see a ton of black birds hanging around one particular tree, some bats flying in and out of the POW camp and of course some rabbits. We ended the investigatin at the POW camp and stopped over by some reconnaissance aircraft and took some pictures by the aircraft. Randy lead us out towards Marysville and Yuba City. He took us to places that may be haunted, or the local people say that these places are haunted. We arrived at the abandoned Marysville Hotel, built in 1872 and took some pictures. We checked out the abandoned State Theatre and took more photos. There were not findings at either location. Our final stop was the Yuba City cemetery. We captured some orb activity at the cemetery and one orb was a bright red in color. It seems like I get a lot of red orb shots at cemeteries for some reason or another. After this long night, we took off and headed back to Sacramento. Shannon needed something to perk her up, so she started playing 'Chase Me - Confunkshun, Bodytalk - The Deele, Make That Move - Shalimar, Good Times - Chic, I'm Every Woman - Chaka Khan, Theme from Shaft - Isaac Hayes, Superfly and Pusherman by Curtis Mayfield, Double Dutch Bus by Frankie Smith.' Before I knew it Shannon was rocking out in my car. Then Shan looks at me and said...'Paul, I don't believe you were ever a dancer!' I have told Shannon I used to be a professional dancer with Jeff Kutache's Dancing Machine in Lake Tahoe and that at one time we were the first number for Cher in 1979, when she went solo. Shannon scoffed. I told Shannon that I was the 3rd and 5th Disco King of Sacramento and won dance contests that were judged by Wolfman Jack and Monterock III (who played the DJ in the movie Saturday Night Fever with John Travolta). More scoffing. I then got so irritated that she was debunking my claims of dancing, I pulled the car over and turned the bright lights on myself and Shan threw on Meeting in the Ladie's Room. I did some freelance dancing on the side of the road, while Shan video taped it and said that this made her whole night. Tim clapped enthusiastically. Yep, I still know my dance moves, don't ever call me out Shan! You're talking to the former disco king of Sacramento! This ended our evening and our investigation of Beale AFB.

Findings:
No EVPs recorded. While we had some interesting responses during the dowsing sessions, we were able to debunk some of the information given.

Conclusions:
This place certainly is an interesting part of history. Whether it is haunted or not is inconclusive just based on what we gathered on this evening. Our host was scratched or burned by something that we can not explain, and some of us felt some strange energies around the cellblock. The dowsing sessions repeatedly identified energies in a particular area, but when it came to answering questions, the rods moved slowly at times, and we were able to debunk some of the information given. It would seem that with such conditions and tragedy surrounding an area, that there would be some haunting activity. While we didn't gather conclusive evidence on this particular night, this would certainly be an interesting place to re-visit.

Before I retired, I had a government job that would send me out to various cities to perform various tasks. When arriving to a city, I would purposely find a hotel that had a reputation of being haunted. While my colleagues would stay at fancy 5-star hotels, I usually stayed at an older rundown hotel to see if the hotel is truly haunted. In a few cases, I wasn't disappointed. I made a list of 10 haunted hotels that paranormal investigators should visit and investigate.

THE ALGONQUIN HOTEL, TIMES SQUARE
The legendary The Algonquin Hotel Times Square, Autograph Collection and its famous Blue Bar are widely reputed in urban lore to be haunted, largely by the literary spirits of the Roaring '20s. Folklore long held that acerbic wit and Round Table member Dorothy Parker haunted the hotel and bar where she and her cohort once congregated. Lore enthusiasts and historians note that reports of Parker’s active ghost went quiet after her earthly remains were finally laid to rest beside her family in 2020, ending her supposed decades-long vigil at the landmark. Visitors and paranormal investigators often claim the entire historic hotel space retains the vibrant, restless energy of its past artistic patrons. Guests have occasionally shared tales of strange elevator anomalies or sudden cold spots throughout the historic property.

CAROUSEL BAR & LOUNGE AT HOTEL MONTELEONE IN NEW ORLEANS, LOUISIANA
The Carousel Bar & Lounge inside the historic Hotel Monteleone in New Orleans is widely reputed to be haunted, with visitors and staff reporting paranormal phenomena tied to the wider landmark. While the rotating bar itself opened in 1949, the 19th-century hotel is famous for sightings of a toddler named Maurice Begere, friendly child spirits on upper floors, and phantom employees. Patrons and staff near the Carousel Bar & Lounge have occasionally reported anomalous cold spots, strange sounds, and apparitions moving from the lobby into the seating areas.

LON'S LAST DROP - THE HERMOSA INN: PARADISE VALLEY, ARIZONA

LON's Last Drop at The Hermosa Inn is widely reputed by staff, guests, and local lore to be haunted. The hauntings are attributed to the property's original builder and namesake, the eccentric cowboy artist Alonzo "Lon" Megargee. He built the adobe structure as his home and studio in the 1930s, and legend says he never truly left. Staff and visitors have reported seeing a tall shadow or a full-apparition figure of a man wearing a cowboy hat lingering in the bar, kitchen, and foyer areas. Staff have reported glasses and bottles flying off shelves or breaking on their own, pots tumbling in the kitchen, and doors closing by themselves. Guests inside the LON's Last Drop bar area have reported feeling sudden, unexpected light touches—such as a tap on the head—when no one else is near. Beyond Lon himself, some ghost stories around the grounds include sightings of a woman in a pink dress near the property's bridge.

THE MAYFLOWER PARK HOTEL

The Mayflower Park Hotel housing Oliver's Lounge in Seattle, Washington is widely considered haunted by local ghost lore. One of their famous ghosts is the 11th-Floor Prankster. The 11th Floor Prankster hangs out at Room 1120. He is a mischievous spirit (reportedly an older gentleman who lived at the hotel long ago) known to move objects, create a feeling of being watched, and play tricks on staff—such as moving a mop bucket to an entirely different floor. Then you have the Sleep-Watcher. Guests on other upper floors have reported waking up to see the apparition of an older man standing or floating near their beds.

THE MISSION INN HOTEL & SPA: RIVERSIDE, CA

The Mission Inn Hotel & Spa in Riverside, California is widely reputed by ghost hunters and local lore to be haunted, though there is no scientific proof. The historic underground tunnels—originally built by founder Frank Miller to house his extensive art collection rather than bodies—are frequently rumored to feature phantom noises, echoing footsteps, and disembodied voices or screams. Visitors and paranormal enthusiasts swap stories of unexplained cold spots, objects moving on their own, floating blue orbs, and phantom singing or music echoing from empty rooms. A popular ghost is Aunt Alice. Some lore points to specific legacy spaces or doors associated with ghostly artist whispers or presences believed to be Aunt Alice. Skeptics note these rooms often yield entirely normal experiences upon investigation. On Reddit, opinions are mixed: while some guests report feeling an eerie, heavy atmosphere in certain historic hallways or hearing faint unusual noises, many others stay and work at the landmark without witnessing any paranormal events. I guess the only way to find out is to actually visit this location and conduct a paranormal investigation.

THE ROUND ROBIN BAR: WILLARD INTERCONTINENTAL: WASHINGTON D.C.

The Round Robin Bar inside the historic Willard InterContinental Washington, D.C. is frequently included in local lore and ghost tours as a haunted location. Legend says the ghost of President Grant—who was a frequent patron of the hotel and the bar during his lifetime. Now his ghost still lingers around the property, with some stories placing his apparition in the lounge enjoying a ghostly cigar and drink. The broader Willard Hotel is famous for ghost stories, including reports of a young boy who haunts the elevators and the spirit of Civil War-era figures.

THE WORT HOTEL / SILVER DOLLAR BAR: JACKSON, WYOMING

The Wort Hotel and its famous Silver Dollar Bar are widely reputed by locals and ghost tour guides to be haunted. The most famous resident spirit is Robert "Bob" Tomingas, a beloved maintenance engineer who worked at the hotel starting in 1950 (the same year the Silver Dollar Bar opened). He was a mechanical wizard who often slept by the boiler during freezing winter nights. Staff and modern engineers still attribute unexplained maintenance help—like tools mysteriously appearing or the maintenance shop being rearranged—to friendly "visits" from Bob. Legend also speaks of young children—frequently tied in lore to a tragic historical event at the hotel in the 1960s—who are occasionally reported by guests and outside onlookers playing or wandering the upper hallways and second-floor windows, only to vanish when investigated.

THE HILTON CINCINNATI NETHERLAND PLAZA: CINCINNATI, OHIO

The Hilton Cincinnati Netherland Plaza is widely considered one of Cincinnati's most haunted hotels, though the specific legends center on the building's historic upper levels and mezzanine areas. A famous ghost is The Lady in Green. The hotel's most famous spirit is said to be the wife of a laborer who fell to his death during the building's construction in 1930–1931. Legend says her husband's body was never found (having supposedly fallen into wet concrete), and her ghost wanders the halls searching for him. Most ghostly encounters, cold spots, and spectral sightings of the "Lady in Green" or a phantom bellhop are reported near the iconic Hall of Mirrors, the Mezzanine level, and guest elevators, rather than the ground-floor lounge areas.

THE MENGER BAR: SAN ANTONIO, TEXAS

The Menger Bar inside the historic Menger Hotel in San Antonio is widely reputed by ghost hunters, staff, and visitors to be haunted. The most famous spectral resident reported in the Menger Bar is former U.S. President Theodore Roosevelt. Roosevelt famously used the bar in 1898 to recruit his "Rough Riders" for the Spanish-American War. Legend says his ghost still appears sitting at the bar or scanning the room the way he did during life, with staff members historically reporting startling encounters with his phantom figure. Opened in 1859, the Menger Hotel is the oldest continuously operating hotel west of the Mississippi River and sits adjacent to the Alamo. The entire property is claimed to house over 30 different spirits, most notably Sallie White, a chambermaid murdered on-site in 1876, and cattle baron Captain Richard King.

THE TAVERN AT BEEKMAN ARMS: RHINEBECK, NEW YORK

The Tavern at Beekman Arms in Rhinebeck, New York, is widely reputed by ghost story enthusiasts and folklore to be haunted, though local opinions on the actual presence of spirits vary. Operating since 1766 as part of America's oldest continuously running inn, the historic building has centuries of foot traffic from notable figures like George Washington and Alexander Hamilton. Ghost hunters and visitors frequently report seeing shadowy figures in the hallways and distinct human forms lingering in older rooms. Numerous paranormal accounts claim that photographs taken inside the historic tavern and surrounding inn often capture unexplained orbs.

THE HILTON BATON ROUGE CAPITOL CENTER

The Tunnel speakeasy and its parent building, the Hilton Baton Rouge Capitol Center (formerly the Heidelberg Hotel), are heavily tied to local ghost stories and rumors of paranormal activity. The underground passage was famously built in the early 1930s and linked old downtown hotels. Legend says volatile Louisiana Governor Huey P. Long used it to dodge the press and visit associates. A popular ghost is the 10th Floor Apparition. While ghost tales place Long's spirit roaming the hotel's 10th floor—where witnesses claim they smell cigar smoke or see a suit-clad figure vanish—recent renovations to the basement tunnel have sparked new spooky lore. Staff members have reported seeing dark, shadowy figures moving through the windowless, pitch-black underground corridors. Workers have shared bizarre claims of flickering lights, sudden temperature drops, and even being inexplicably grabbed on the leg while inside the subterranean space.

Colfax Hosts Red, White, and Bluegrass July 4th

by Bob Thomas

The town of Colfax, California really gets into the celebration of our Independence Day with a weekend long series of festivities. There were street vendors, kids rides and games, a huge parade on the fourth, and bluegrass music piped throughout the town from the stage.

Friday and Saturday, CBA folks helped sell apple pie and ice cream to raise money for the bluegrass bands. They sold out all 30 pies and 10 gallons of ice cream. They raised over $700, less the cost of the pies.

There was bluegrass jamming on main street, in several places, and up on the school parking lot which was reserved for CBA folks in RVs. Jamming started early Friday and continued through sometime Sunday.

In the middle of town stood a vacant commercial building lot for at least 50 years. Well, the town folk got a one year lease on the lot, and created a small park, called the "Lot of Arts." It is complete with concrete walk ways, a contoured lawn and a stage. It was on this stage that the bluegrass bands performed throughout the weekend. High above and behind the stage were hung brightly colored parachutes that provided shade for the bands.

Slate Mountain Bluegrass band and Past Due and Playable performed on Friday afternoon and evening. The Red Dirt Bullies from Chico and Big Valley Band from Wilton, performed on Saturday. On Sunday morning, Grace Avenue Band, from Orangevale provided the music for the gospel hour.

Robby Robinson, Colfax Chamber of Commerce President, told several CBA members how much he enjoyed the music and the bluegrass people who came to play. As the town filled on Friday evening preparing for the fireworks show, Past Due and Playable entertained a large audience and the music was broadcast throughout the town.

The town of Colfax is looking forward to next year's celebration and even more bluegrass music.

Bill's Guitar

John Howard Payne

Early this year, my wife and I were vacationing in Southern California. While there we had dinner with a friend of ours, Bill Gotcher. During dinner Bill said to me: "I understand that you play the guitar", and stated that he had an old guitar that had been passed down through his mother's family to him. He asked if I would like to see the guitar the next time he was in Sacramento.

Several weeks went by when I got a call from Bill stating that he was going to be in Sacramento and would bring along the guitar. We met with Bill one afternoon and he brought out this wooden guitar case. What a pleasant surprise to find this wonderfully preserved guitar a little larger than a Baby Taylor. It was in very fine condition.

Bill explained that his Great, Great, Great Aunt Mary was none other than Mary Harden the sweetheart of John Howard Payne, the author of "Home Sweet Home", and this guitar was her guitar. On this guitar she played "Home Sweet Home", for John Payne. Bill asked if I would play, "Home Sweet Home", for him. Afterwards Bill said, "you are probably the first person to have played "Home Sweet Home" on this guitar in over a hundred years". I asked Bill if I could copy some of the documentation that he had with him and he graciously agreed. After spending a very pleasant afternoon with Bill and playing several other bluegrass tunes I started to put the guitar back in it's case and Bill said, "would you play, "Home Sweet Home", one more time on the guitar".

Subject: The Phantoms of The House of Iron and The Peltier Bridge in Lodi Sun Mar 02, 2008 3:59 am QUOTE

The Phantoms of The House of Iron and The Peltier Bridge in Lodi
By Paul Dale Roberts, HPI Ghostwriter

On this day, Saturday, March 1, 2008, I woke up early in the morning to prepare for a preliminary investigation in Lodi. I stopped over at Starbucks on Laguna Blvd & Franklin to snort down a vinte vanilla latte, the only way I can get a jump start early in the morning as I awaited for my two HPI paranormal investigators-in-training Dee Austria and Jennifer Martinez. We were headed to The Peltier Bridge near Lodi. The Peltier Road is a stretch of lonely highway that seems to lead to nowhere. A horrific brutal crime was committed on Peltier Road and this link explains it all:

http://cbs5.com/deathrow/Terri.Winchell.Michael.2.440579.html

Some residents claim that the murder occurred near the bridge. But, before this murder took place, their have been claims of haunting activities at this bridge since the 1950s. There is a story of a girl that crosses the bridge late at night and then vanishes into the fog that frequently engulfs this bridge. High school kids have been known to hang out near and around the bridge late at night to see if they can see this ghostly apparition.

I have another story, that is going to put you right on the edge-of-your seat. Did you know that over 60 years before alien abduction claims became mainstream, two people were nearly abducted in Lodi, California near the Peltier Bridge? Nope, I didn't think you knew this story, so I am going to tell it, sit down kiddies as Ghosthunter Paul tells you a very bizarre story. Now where was I? Oh ya, the UFO story. Anyway, Colonel H. G. Shaw and his friend Camille Spooner had a close encounter with two occupants of a UFO. Both were traveling by horse and carriage and the horses stopped in fright when the UFO made its appearance known to them. The aliens were described as three tall aliens. They were described as having delicate hands. They had bald heads, large eyes, small mouths, similar to what present day abductees call 'grays', but since they were tall, they probably fit more with the praying mantis gray alien description. The beings had a breathing apparatus, that they would frequently use in front of Shaw and Spooner. They also carried egg shaped lamps that glowed. The aliens seemed to want Shaw and Spooner to go with them on their ship. When the aliens detected a negative response from Shaw and Spooner, they finally retreated to their ship and sped off into the night sky. Since we are investigating this bridge in broad daylight, I seriously doubt that I will get an anal probe today. Whew! Now back to the ghosts of Peltier Bridge.

As we arrived at this bridge, Jenn, Dee and I took many photographs and tried to collect some EVP evidence. I will let you know at a later time, if we collected any evidence of that I would consider significant.

Jenn drove us into the older section of Lodi and we stopped off at a hotel for low income people. I talked with the manager and he said that the hotel does have paranormal activity, but doesn't want any publicity, so we left. Our next stop was at the House of Iron www.houseofiron.net http://www.houseofiron.net (209) 366-1900 - 21 W. Locust Street, Lodi, CA 95240. This old building is 105 years old. I met Suzanna Elliott the owner and her lovely daughter Amy Smith. This mother and daughter team were exceptionally fun to talk with, they both had bubbly personalities! I was entranced with their stories. The House of Iron is like a museum! They have unique handmade pieces, iron gates, garden accent pieces, ornate sculptures and statuaries, beautiful home accessories, marble tables, wine art, ceramics, vases, furniture and custom iron work. I almost forgot I was ghosthunting as I was surveying this marvelous establishment. It was eye-candy for any tourist in this small town called Lodi. I thought to myself, Creedence Clearwater Revival would love being stuck in Lodi again, if they were inside the House of Iron! Amy has been running this shop for 7 years now and she loves hearing the stories about the building that is directly behind her. The building directly behind her has been certified haunted by KCRA. From her second floor balcony, customers have claimed to have seen an old lady looking out from the 2nd floor window of the other building. She usually likes to make faces at her customers, the faces that she makes are scary looking. Customers of her establishment have claimed to have seen a ghostly man and a ghostly little girl from the building next door. The House of Iron is a mere 25 feet away from the haunted building next door. Customers looking to buy a beautiful iron piece at times come running out from the back claiming they have seen a ghost from the building next door. Now with ghosts so close to you, I can only wonder if those ghosts at times visit the House of Iron? It was time for my small team of ghosthunters-in-training to try and retrieve some EVPs and see if they can get any paranormal photographic evidence. Suzanna gave them a grand tour as I continued to talk with Amy. I learned that the House of Iron used to be an actual home for probably some wealthy Lodi family. The House of Iron looks majestic and I can feel that this place must have some kind of residual place memory within its structures.

Not only that, there are antiques around this building, like an old confessional laying in the backyard. Old antiques can carry residual energy. This confessional once blew away with a ferocious might, when a big storm hit. As heavy as this wooden confessional is, it's hard to imagine that this antique piece would be carried away by the wind. Jenn notifies me that she charged her battery last night and when she got near the confessional it mysteriously drained. Entities have been known to drain power sources, such as batteries. So, I took note of this. As I pushed on with my interviews with Suzanna and Amy they have told me that at times the lights go off and on by themselves. They are talking about the lights in the House of Iron. This tells me that something very strange is also happening at the House of Iron. One of the scariest moments that happened at the House of Iron is when the lady ghost next door was yelling at one of their male customers from the 2nd floor window. Their customer was frightened by the experience. The building next door is now some kind of tax service building. It used to be a home health care office too. The second story windows of the building next door are now covered with aluminum foil, as if the owner of this building doesn't want his ghosts to look out the window anymore. Amy tells me that there was one other time she had a paranormal experience. She went on to describe on how she would constantly find dimes on the floor. She started thinking, that the dimes were left at strategic areas of the house, to remind her of her grandfather, a coin collector. Could the spirit of Amy's grandfather left those dimes on the floor as a show of remembrance of his life? Amy's mother Suzanna may be an intuitive, because at times she has dreams that take place in the future. Suzanna dreamed about a car accident of someone that was close to her and a couple days later, a car accident did occur, in which the car was sheered practically in half, everyone survived, including the dog that was in the car.

I am truly looking forward to seeing what evidence we gathered and analyzing any crucial evidence that we might have. Jenn, Dee and I, ended this preliminary investigation by swinging by the old Franklin cemetery, another place we want to scout out, sometime in the near future! To see pictures from this investigation, please stop by here:

http://ghosts.meetup.com/231/photos/upload/

FINDINGS:
No photographic paranormal evidence from Paul's camera of the Peltier Bridge location or the House of Iron.
Photographic evidence from Jenn's camera (See Jen's email to me).
EVP caught at House of Iron. I had my neighbor Rukesh Kumar listen to the EVP, it sounds like a little girl giggling, then talking. It sounds like: "heh, heh, heh..he's funny." Rukesh agrees with my assessment. Rukesh is not a ghost hunter, but I wanted his opinion and asked him what he heard, without telling him what I think I am hearing.
EVP evidence from Jenn still pending.

Jenn's email to me in regard to her photographs today:
Hey Paul!
It was great scouting with you today! We enjoyed your stories and learning new things! I need to listen to my EVP's. I didn't find much anything of significance in the photos. These two were the only ones that anything seemed questionable. This first picture (top left corner... notice the tree branches go blurry...almost like a mist) I guess it could be something out of focus. But, who knows! (Paul's comment - it's an odd photo and I would assume that everything else should be out of focus, why just that one tree branch - very interesting photo that needs further analysis).

The second picture below is probably just my eyes playing tricks on me. When i look in the reflection of the window, the top right quadrant of the picture almost looks like a woman or a girl with long hair or some sort of veil (like a nun) and she is looking towards the right.... But, it's probably just wishful thinking.
Maybe a reflection from the clouds!" (Paul's comments - Thank you for your hard work Jenn, I will have this photo analyzed also).

Before I close this article, I got a call from Brenda Thomas and she related to me, that if I ever head over to Arkansas, there is a home that she wants me to look into. It's haunted by the Crazy Cat Lady. The Crazy Cat Lady when she was alive, had up to 50 cats living with her. She still resides in this home as a ghost and when Brenda lived in this home, she would constantly hear footsteps, felt like someone was watching her and the curtains would always move. The windows would be closed and there was no wind causing the curtains to move. The Crazy Cat Woman lived in this home for 40 years and still causes disturbances. My message to the Crazy Cat Woman. "Hey..Crazy Cat Woman...dontcha think it's time to go into the light? Geesh, people don't want to live in this house, because of you, don't make me come down to Arkansas!" I hope that works Brenda!

The Encounter

- Date: November 25, 1896
- Location: Near the Woodbridge canal, between Lodi and Stockton, California.
- The Witnesses: Civil War veteran and journalist Colonel H.G. Shaw and his companion, Camille Spooner.
- The Beings: Shaw reported encountering three seven-foot-tall, slender humanoid creatures with small hands, no fingernails, and unusually long feet. The beings emitted a warbling noise and attempted to force Shaw aboard an immense, landed airship-like craft before he reportedly overpowered them and fled.

Historical Context

- The 1896 Mystery Airship Flap: The event occurred during a massive wave of "phantom airship" sightings across California and the American West, predating powered flight by the Wright brothers and the modern coining of the term "UFO".
- Media Sensation: The account was published in the Stockton Evening Mail on November 27, 1896, kicking off sensationalized newspaper reporting during the height of the era's "yellow journalism". While some viewed the tale as a tall tale or hoax, it remains a foundational cornerstone of modern extraterrestrial and UFO lore.
